

"SMILING BEAUTIES" ARE LAUGH PROVOKERS AT COLUMBIA THEATRE.

The Smiling Beauties, this week at the Columbia Theatre are making a "big" business with their two act business, and here and there with little bits of first class vaudeville.

The first act takes place in the busy parlors of Dr. Mike Murphy (Harry K. Morton), and Dr. Jack Coleman (Joe Emerson), who are not really doctors. June Mills, fat and funny, caused waves of laughter. The last part of the first act is a travesty on Warden Osborne's Golden Rule Brotherhood at Sing Sing and if prison life is really the way it was plotted last night, jail will get many recruits.

In the second act the audience is asked to imagine themselves in 1913, during which time the Suffragettes are running everything in the line of politics giving rise to many ludicrous situations.

During the intermission Miss Ella Russell, Queen of the Ives, did justice to her title, while Maudie Lyster and Maudie Dorsey cannot receive too much praise for their singing and dancing numbers.

Box Seated to Death in Tub.

Stanley Fisher, three, of No. 31 Fortieth Street, Brooklyn, died last night at the Holy Family Hospital, where he was taken from his home in the morning suffering from typhoid. His mother placed a tub of boiling water on the stove. While she was out of the room the little boy got out of his high chair and fell into the tub.

So much more delicious!

The next time you want to serve something especially nice, have Aunt Jemima's Pancakes.

Aunt Jemima's is the one pancake flour that has milk already mixed in it. That is why the flavor of Aunt Jemima's Pancakes is so different—so much more delicious.

A trifling cost. Order a package of Aunt Jemima's Pancake Flour. Notice what a big, generous box it is—20 ounces of goodness! Think how many times you could give your family this treat.

Try it tomorrow. Like thousands of other housekeepers, you will say that there is no other way to serve, for such a trifling cost, such a popular and delicious dish.

"Quinneys" a Quaintly Humorous English Comedy.

BY CHARLES DARNTON

IF YOU like a good book, with human characters making their way slowly through the pages, you will like "Quinneys," put into more or less action last night at Maxine Elliott's Theatre.

First of all, you must adapt yourself to England, where the stage "punch" is left to the imagination. In this case, the story is as mild as a cup of tea. The author, Horace Annesley Vachell, does not attempt to make anything more of it. He simply gives you human characters and leaves you to imagine drama that is as old as the world and as young as the romance to which poets and others give their lives. In a way, Mr. Vachell is a poet. He takes a materialistic point of view and at the same time turns it into a romantic channel. The really important thing about "Quinneys" is that it gets away from the conventional play so dear to the stage.

The story may be told in a very few words. The keeper of an antique shop in the Soho district of London is proud of his reputation. He has a charming daughter, with whom a clever workman is in love. It is an easy matter, of course, for this workman to turn new material into old Chippendale chairs. But when the conscientious dealer realizes he has sold himself out so far as his reputation is concerned, he is naturally worried, and he takes little stock in the young workman. However, Jim turns out to be something better than "rubbish," and so everything ends as Arnold Bennett, perhaps, would have it end.

"Quinneys" is essentially a play of character. The antique dealer is curiously honest and his daughter is honestly in love with the young man who is making his way through the shop. The fact that a dishonest dealer is responsible for mixing the Chippendale is neither here nor there. True love runs its course, and if Potash and Perlmutter were called upon to say anything in this connection they would probably remain discreetly silent. It is enough to say that the poor young man wins the daughter of his employer. Incidentally, it may be remarked that the young man is put to the test of saying a few things to an amorous working girl who has nothing to say for herself. This is the weak point in the play.

Though Frederick Ross, as Quinney, was more like a pawnbroker than an antique dealer, he succeeded in making the principal character both human and humorous. Margaret Watson gave a touch of reality to the wife of the man who delighted in talking about himself. Peggy Rush was not only very pretty

WOMAN TAKEN TO HOSPITAL IN AMBULANCE ON STRETCHER

Suffered Terribly from Rheumatic Arthritis—Used Wheel Chair, Iron Brace and Crutches—Gives Credit to Var-ne-sis.

Suffering from rheumatic arthritis so severely that she had to be taken on a stretcher in the ambulance to Worcester Hospital to be taken was the experience of Mrs. Eleanor M. Wood of 11 Tirrell St., Worcester, Mass.

this I discarded one of my crutches, then the other, and today I can walk without any assistance whatever. Not only did Var-ne-sis remove the rheumatic condition, but I have improved in general health as well. I think it is a remarkable remedy and am recom-

IRON BRACE, SPLINTS AND CRUTCHES USED BY MRS. E. M. WOOD.

Mrs. Wood said: I suffered so intensely from the pain in my knees and arm that I could not allow any one to even touch the bed, my condition grew gradually worse in spite of treatment and finally got so bad that I had to go to the hospital in the ambulance. I was carried in on a stretcher and after remaining there some time was placed in a wheel chair and given the baking treatment.

On account of the extreme pain and stiffness in the knee an iron brace with splints was made for me, and with the assistance of crutches I was able to move about with a great deal of pain. I left the hospital very little better if any than when I entered, and as I had the best of treatment I felt pretty much discouraged. My knee was bent and I suffered excruciating pain when I attempted to move. I was sore and lame all over and my arm was also very stiff and sore.

Reading so much about Var-ne-sis and its success in rheumatism of the joints, I decided to give it a trial. After taking the medicine some time I could see a change, and one day I took the iron brace off; shortly after commencing Var-ne-sis to all who suffer as I did. I have loaned my brace, splints and crutches to Mr. Varney to add to his large collection of crutches, wheel chairs, canes, etc. No rheumatic can afford to ignore the tremendous evidence that stands behind Var-ne-sis. In rheumatism and particularly in chronic rheumatism of the joints it has been highly successful. Every day that a rheumatic sufferer puts off taking Var-ne-sis is just one more day of needless suffering. Send to W. A. Varney, Lynn, Mass., for the new edition of his newspaper devoted to rheumatism.

Var-ne-sis is the remedy that was the means of "Happy Bill" walking after spending fifteen years in a wheel chair. Investigate any or all of the testimonials.

Var-ne-sis Boston office is maintained for the benefit of those taking Var-ne-sis and to exhibit the collection of crutches, wheel chairs, etc.
